

students take first at competition

In Spring 2005, the Marquette Law School team placed first in the country at the 2005 finals for the Saul Lefkowitz Moot Court Competition in Trademark Law. It is the national champion!

The competition began regionally, with more than 65 teams involved. At the finals in Washington, D.C., Marquette bested the winners of the other regionals: Boston College, University of Alabama, and Santa Clara University.

Perhaps equally impressively, the Marquette trademark team has reached the finals for three consecutive years.

Special thanks go to Andy Rossmeissl, the 2004 finalist, for his coaching and guidance, but the success is shared by all the judges, attorneys, and staff involved in the competition.
