CENTRAL BASKETBALL DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE (CBDL)

League Update: In February 2016, the CBDL announced it officially merged with the North American Basketball League (NABL). The merge was designed to create a bigger league with sixteen teams across eight states in the south central and southeast region. However, in April 2016, Benjamin Mireles, former co-owner of the NABL, announced that he was reforming the CBDL due to unfortunate circumstances and disputes with the other owner of the NABL. Mr. Mireles stated he did not foresee the CBDL being operational for the 2016-17 season, but are hoping to have teams playing in the league in 2017-18.

Facility Financing: Private loans financed the building. The District of Columbia provided $60 million in infrastructure costs.

Facility Website

Update: In 2016, the WNBA and Verizon announced a leaguewide marquee partnership. As a marquee partner, Verizon branding will be prominently displayed on the front of the Washington Mystics jerseys.

In February 2016, construction began on the Washington Wizards' 118,000-square-foot practice facility. The facility will also include a 5,000 seat arena for the Mystics to play in. The facility is expected to be completed by September 2018 and generate $90 million in tax revenue over two decades. The facility has a $55 million budget, with $5 million coming from Ted Leonis, and the remaining ninety percent coming from taxpayers. Taxpayers voted their approval of the deal. The new practice facility has been marred with controversy due to the fact that the City is on the hook for any costs over the budget that arise as the project unfolds.

NAMING RIGHTS: The name of the arena changed from the MCI Center to the Verizon Center in March 2006. The change was the result of Verizon's merger with MCI. Verizon is paying $44 million over twenty years, $2.2 million annually, for the naming rights that expire in 2017. It has been reported that Verizon Wireless will not be renewing its naming rights once the current agreement expires.
